Lack of nitroprusside's effect on bladder contractility in pregnant rats. Nitroprusside is commonly used to reduce maternal blood pressure in severe preeclampsia. Little is known about the potential effects of nitroprusside on bladder contractility. To evaluate the effects of nitroprusside on both in vitro (strip preparations) and in vivo (intravenous and intrauterine infusion) bladder contractility in pregnant rats. In vitro studies were performed in pregnant rats during the last two days of gestation. Fetal bladder strips were mounted in an organ bath and contractility was determined by measuring increases in isometric tension development. In vivo studies used either intrauterine or intravenous infusion of either saline or nitroprusside. In vivo bladder contractility and mean arterial blood pressure were measured in both normal pregnant and hypertensive rats. A continuous infusion of nitroprusside was also administered to normal pregnant rats. Nitroprusside (100 microM) failed to alter either basal or electrically induced contractility of in vitro bladder strips ($P > 0.05$) and failed to significantly alter bladder contractility in normal pregnant rats. However, in hypertensive rats, nitroprusside caused a significant reduction in micturition pressure (51 +/- 3 mm Hg vs. 32 +/- 2 mm Hg, P Q: How to close the previous windows with the maximize button in C# I have a code like this (in a button click event) this.Hide(); this.Show(); this.WindowState = FormWindowState.Maximized; It works. A comparison of the Histamine-Binding Autoreceptor in Monkeys and Man. The ability of various histamine-Binding Autoreceptors (HBARs) to modulate the release of histamine is under the control of 5-HT in the rat and the cholinergic system in the guinea pig. We report evidence that histaminergic neurons may be modulated by two peptide neurotransmitters, the melanocyte-stimulating hormones and the gonadotrophic hormones in the primate. Q: Splitting a string in bash So i have the following string: "02/12/2018 12:00:00 AM" I am using sed to get the number from the string, e.g "201812". The date in this example is the first number in the string, and could come in any order. What I am having a problem with is the string could also be "01/12/2018 12:00:00 AM" but in that case the date would be the second number "12". What i would like to do is to split the string in the example into two numbers - 2018 and 12 (ignoring the AM/PM and using AM in the example): "01/12/2018" "12" This is what I have right now but it is not working: #!/bin/bash myString="01/12/2018 12:00:00 AM" echo $(echo $myString | sed -e "s/[^0-9]/g") A: Assuming you want to keep the AM/PM value, you can split on the "0" and "1" substrings, where your regular expression is s/([0-1])/(1)/g A: With GNU sed: string="02/12/2018 12:00:00 AM" echo ${string//[0-9]} "${sed -E's/([0-9])/"\1"/g;s/([0-1])[0-9]\1/"
