LCM Calculator is a simple application that gives you the possibility to find out the least common multiple (also known as lowest common multiple) for up to any five numbers. It particularly comes in handy when you don't have a working Internet connection to look up the math formula online, whether you're a math student or just need to obtain this information as quickly as possible. Heavily ad-supported tool The installer of LCM Calculator is loaded with third-party, unnecessary components offered for setup, along with some modifications for your web browser settings. Unless you're interested in these, you can decline or skip the offers to make a clean setup, as long as you don't rush through the wizard stages. Administrative privileges may be required at startup to avoid errors and crashes. The interface consists of just one panel showing a single box in the initial phase, asking you to enter the total numbers (up to five). Calculate the least common multiple In the following step, it reveals as many additional boxes as the specified number, where you can enter the values whose least common multiple you want to discover. The calculations are done with the click of a button, and the result can be selected and copied to the Clipboard. There are no options available for printing, copying or saving all displayed information to file, which would have simplified tasks when you want to perform sequential calculations in a short amount of time. Evaluation and conclusion The software utility doesn't offer much in terms of features. On top of that, we've experienced some stability issues in our tests, as it crashed a couple of times after entering values. In the remaining cases, it made calculations quickly and displayed accurate results. Too bad that LCM Calculator takes an aggressive approach toward third-party offers.
