I am trying to fire validation method on client side after JS validation. This is my client side validation code :
$("#ItemRegistration").validate({ debug : true, rules : { PartNumber : { required : true } }, messages : { PartNumber : { required : "Please enter Part Number" } }, submitHandler : function(form) { form.submit(); } }); This works and fires validation. I need the submitHandler method to fire after the validation is finished. How can I achieve this? A: You should be able to use the errorPlacement method of the validate plugin to do that. It can be passed either an event handler function: $("#ItemRegistration").validate({ debug : true, rules : { PartNumber : { required : true } }, messages : { PartNumber : { required : "Please enter Part Number" } }, submitHandler : function(form) { form.submit(); }, errorPlacement: function
