the presence of lymphoma cells in the central nervous system \[\[@B15 \]. Although the prognosis for children with brain metastases is considered favorable \[\[@B1], [@B2] \], the prognosis for adults with brain metastases is generally poor. The median survival after brain metastases in the literature is short (3.0 months) \[[@B5]\]. In our patients, as the chemotherapy was an effective component of the treatment, the median survival of adults with brain metastases was 17.2 months, which is comparable with the value in children.

However, the median survival of the patient with metastatic heart disease was 18.8 months and her age was 38 years; thus, she was considered to have a good prognosis.

Neurological symptoms from lung cancer may be related to the mass effect of the tumor in some cases. In our patient, brain metastases were incidentally detected on CT in a patient with lung cancer, and symptoms related to the brain metastases were not evident until 10 months later. From this case, we presume that brain metastases associated with small cell lung cancer may be asymptomatic and silent. Conclusions

===== This is the first report of neuroimaging findings in asymptomatic and silent brain metastases in small cell lung cancer (SCLC). Brain metastases were detected incidentally in this patient who had been diagnosed with SCLC and had a history of smoking. A diagnosis Turbulencefd.Cinema.4d.Mac.keygen.rar.Q: What is the "Maximum number of files in a single request" limit in Azure? I am uploading huge files (~40 gig) to Azure Blob Storage and I am hitting "Maximum number of files in a single request" limit. What is this limit and how to I overcome this limit? A: A request can contain up to 5 MB of file upload data. This can be divided over 1 request or over more request. So if you are sending one request to upload a single large file, you'll be limited to 5 MB. I don't know the Azure Limit to upload a big file. But I guess you will exceed it.
