Numerous legends, both early and later, portray Mayurasharma as a Chakravarti or Karna-like figure. The legendary Chakravarti legends trace the legendary dynasty to the time of the legendary King Marasimha, which is not known to have ever happened. These legends appear to be deliberate forgery and attempts to legitimize the dynasty by subordinating it to the founder legend of Marasimha. The history of the first Kadamba kings is recorded in the inscriptions, but there is no mention in the legends. The legends are a collection of myths, legends, fables, and myths, variously attributed to the founder legend of king Marasimha, the ancestors of the family, and by extension, the founder legend of the dynasty. [17] The legends have been attributed to various dynastic founders, namely: "Bana Mani"; "Sri Arulendra Cholkinai Mahasena"; "Vyasa"; "Puluva"; "Sthavarata"; "King Salivahana"; "King Bana"; and "King Bana Arisina" (see references below). The details recorded in the inscriptions can not account for the origin of a dynasty that has lasted for over 1000 years. Thus, the second native kingdom of the state of Karnataka was an outcome of a collective strong defiance against any aggression from the north, and the first phase of this respect was the Kadamba ascendancy. In the second phase, an invading force of Jain monks settled on the banks of the Tungabhadra river, bringing an entirely new set of people into Karnataka, the Jains, and in the third stage, the various waves of invaders played a game of chess to outmanoeuvre each other and put their own man on the throne. It was a multifaceted dance of conquest and clash of armies, the minutest details of which have been traced by historians. The pallava ViraSarma I [4] started his reign in AD 916, the earliest ruler of Karnataka, while the later ones ruled until the 12th century, paving the way for the glorious, but short-lived, Buddhist empire, that controlled the entire south of India until their defeat by the Muslim invasion. Thus, the first native kingdom of Karnataka is considered to have been founded by Mayurasharma and he will be remembered as the founder of the state of Karnataka.

Dantidurga is named after Mayurasharma's grandson, Dantidurga [9], who established Kannada as the administrative language of the state and installed Kadamba scripts on the monuments of Dantidurga.
Mayurasharma's name was used to designate the principal festival of the Kadambas- a festival that never went out of vogue and remained one of the three principal festivals of Karnataka till modern times. This is the only attempt by one state to make a linguistic change by replacing indigenous words with words in Sanskrit and perhaps even introducing an element of ritualism. Later, there were claims by the Kannada speaking state leaders to be only Karnatakans. During the 11th century C.E., Dantidurga was succeeded by his son, Dantivarma, who is said to have been of a formidable character. Dantidurga's son, Rameshvarma, was the founder of Vijayapura. One of the most dignified and learned among the kings, Mayurasharma had married the daughter of an illustrious saint and philosopher, Kadamba Devaditya. [12] As a scion of a line of saintly members of the Gotra, Mayurasharma ensured the continuation of the erudite bent of mind among the vassals who were, at best, occupied with good works and not with the incessant flow of wars and power struggles in the Gandhara kingdom. There were of the three, Shivasharma, Kesava I and Narasimhavarma, that inherited the entire kingdom from their father, Mayurasharma. 5ec8ef588b
